Carolyn Dunster : Urban Flowers: Creating abundance in a small city garden before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Urban Flowers: Creating abundance in a small city garden:

My absolute favorite parts are all the great ways to repurpose unusual containers to grow and display the beautiful flowers. There are examples and inspiration for all sorts of styles from country to modern. The book features a section all about color that will most assuredly make it hard to pick which one(s) to go with in my garden. There is a tutorial on how to even plant upside down! How unexpected and fun way to garden. There is also an interesting way to put an pot in a cut glass that I am so going to replicate with my stash of pots and glasses.

Creating colour and interest in a small urban garden by growing a range of flowers and other decorative plants brings with it many rewards. Carolyn Dunster shows you what to grow and how to use your own blooms, leaves and berries in a range of indoor displays and hand-tied bouquets. Locally-grown flowers in season is a significant and welcome trend in floristry, and just as eating a tasteless strawberry in December pricks our consciences, so too does purchasing a bouquet of tulips in September, however stunning they may be to look at. The most local, seasonal flowers, which are the most satisfying to give and to display, are the ones you have grown yourself. Carolyn Dunster shows you how to do this in the smallest of spaces.

"This charming book, written by a garden designer and florist, is filled with ideas on how to make the most of even the smallest space. There is sound advice on choosing plants and colour schemes, and ingenious projects include a herb wall along a fence." * Daily Mail *About the Author Carolyn Dunster trained in floristry with Jane Packer and now works as a florist and planting designer, running her business, Urban Flowers, from her home in north London. She has written for several magazines including House Garden and Country Homes Interiors. She exhibits regularly at garden shows and flower festivals in the UK, and recently co-designed a small cutting garden at the RHS Hampton Court Palace Flower Show behalf of Katies Lymphoedema Fund, which won the Peoples Choice Award. She designs planting schemes for small urban plots and grows as many flowers as possible in her own city garden to use in her floristry work.
